

Woollam Constructions hard to beat

“AT THE forefront of the commercial and industrial construction industry largely in part to a company that can boast exceptional people on all levels is our Company, Woollam Constructions, said regional manager Bob McGregor.

“Our staff retention averages around 12 years and by continuing to nurture the futures of our young people and help develop their careers this enables them to remain with Woollam Constructions.”

Central Queensland Region Housing and Construction Awards are not only a reflection of the exceptional standard of work produced by this company, but also their commitment to the local area.

From Rockhampton’s Benevolent Home to the Red Hill Homemakers Centre and Boyne Tannum Memorial Parklands, this company is involved in designing projects that can only be described as landmarks.

Bob said Woollam Constructions had become renowned for such a broad range of styles for both the private and public sectors.

“We have proven that we can construct any style of building that our clients request, and it is for this reason throughout the years that we have been recognised at both a regional and state level through awards such as these,” he said.

“It is acknowledgement for the whole team from myself right through to the sub contractors and everyone involved,” Bob said proudly.
