

ADVERTORIAL: TERMINUS BUSINESS PARK

QLD investments in property

By Justine Gorman

CONSTRUCTION in the Mackay and regional area is booming and with the average annual population growth sitting at 3.5 per cent on last year (based on Queensland Government figures) the trend is expected to continue.

It's no surprise then that property development is so prodigious with industrial, commercial and residential accommodation rushing to meet demand.

The new $25mn Terminus Business Park has been designed by leading architects Nettleton Tribe and brings new, innovative ideas that will offer state-of-the-art office, warehouse, workshop and showroom facilities. This exciting facility on the Bruce Highway is set to become the hub of local industry.

Rob Tisdell will be managing the site, who also worked on Mackay's Bluewater Lagoon aquatic facility. With the recent opening of the three-pool complex, industry recognised Woollam Constructions were able to bring this long-awaited Government funded project to life.

Newcastle born Robert Tisdell completed the final part of his apprenticeship in Mackay with well know builders Woollam Constructions and has spent the last 14 years developing his knowledge and reputation within the company. This month he will start work on the new Terminus Business Park development, situated within the Industroplex complex at Paget. "It's exciting to be involved in quality projects," Tisdell said, "and Woollam Constructions has built its reputation in part thanks to its association with such visionary work." □
